A Privilege To Serve

Sir:

Recently, I had the privilege of representing President Alden and Ohio University alumni at the inauguration of Charles Louis Balcer as 16th President of Augustana College on September 18 in Sioux Falls, South Dakota. I want to let President Alden and the alumni know what a wonderful experience it was for me. The inauguration was hampered somewhat by inclement weather, however, it turned out to be an excellent program. There were over 250 Universities and Colleges represented. I was especially proud of the inauguration parade. We were lined up according to the year your school was founded. I am happy to say we were the 11th oldest University present.

When I lived in St. Louis, I had an opportunity to attend the Alumni Club, but since my transfer to South Dakota, 2½ years ago, I no longer have the opportunity to see old friends and take part in Ohio University alumni functions. The inauguration and the Ohio Alumnus magazine make me feel that I am still very much a part of Ohio University.

Time For A Visit

Sir:

After receiving the last copy of the Ohio Alumnus, I decided to sit right down and inform your office of the changes in my life in the last few years.

I am the former Carol A. Schrin—BSEd '62. My husband, William F. Jones is a Case '61 graduate. We have a daughter, Tori, who is three. My husband is a graduate student at Case and I am teaching first grade in the Willoughby-Eastlake Schools.

I'm sure I speak for everyone when I thank you for the wonderful job you do on the Ohio Alumnus. Each time I receive it, I have the urge to jump in my car and drive down to pay a visit.

Viet Nam Photographer

Sir:

Thought your July issue was a good job. I got a kick out of your box on James Pickerell. It must be the same photographer who has been working for me in Viet Nam . . . and the incident could be any one of three described in the enclosed release. (I'm sure October 19 was a mistake.)

Amazed By Progress

Sir:

I have enjoyed receiving the Ohio Alumnus over the past years and find myself looking forward to each copy. I find your publication to be the ideal tie between Ohio University and the departed student of many years. I can't help but be amazed and proud of the progress that my alma mater has made over the last few years. In my opinion, your magazine and Ohio University are the best.

Since my last correspondence with you, I have been graduated from the University of Arizona with my Masters degree in civil engineering. I am presently a Captain in the Air Force and assigned as the Chief of Engineering and Construction, Base Civil Engineers, Shu Lin Kou Air Station, Taiwan.

A Noted Improvement

Sir:

I have thoroughly enjoyed receiving the Ohio Alumnus magazine. But may I request that it be sent to 400 Deming Pl., Chicago 14, Ill. I have had two address changes since 1550 N. Dearborn Pkwy., and I'm sure the post office would appreciate it.

The magazine, I believe, has improved in layout and stories. I do hope this isn't a nostalgic viewpoint.

Former Dean Writes

Sir:

Although I am not an alumnus of Ohio University, I shall be interested in the welfare of the Institution for the rest of my life. I would appreciate being placed on the mailing list to receive the Ohio University Alumnus.

Thank you for your attention. It has been a rich privilege to serve at Ohio University.

Sir:

I haven't received a copy of the Ohio Alumnus in over a year and am feeling very left out of the news.

A small scale Ohio reunion took place at my house last fall. Those present were Larry A. Williams, '59, Ron Bell, '61, Mary Ann Hofer, '61, Karen Jackson, '63, and myself, all now of Seattle. Also here on a visit was Jan Jeffries Weber, '60, from Kennewick, Washington.

We'd be very interested in knowing of other Ohio alumni now living in the Seattle area.

Change of Address

Sir:

This is just a notice of change of address. Having completed my graduate studies at the California Institute of Technology, I have taken a job as Instructor of Chemistry at the Iowa State University, Ames, Iowa.

I have always enjoyed keeping up with events at Ohio University through the Ohio Alumnus and am looking forward to the future issues.

ALUMNI REUNION

The trucks halted a few hundred yards from the hamlet, and a platoon of soldiers climbed out and quietly went into the trees to form a loose circle around the little cluster of thatched huts. After waiting a few minutes, six men clad in black pajamas left the trucks and walked down the dusty path into the hamlet.

Chickens flew out of their way, and the suspicious peasants stood quietly in the doorways. There had been several combat operations near the hamlet, and the presence of strangers was one of the early indications of an impending battle.

The visitors began to chat with the peasants. The tensions soon disappeared, and the strangers—five Vietnamese and an American—became guests. The peasants began to boil water for tea.

The American squatted with three villagers around a pot of tea, and in a quiet, conversational manner began to ask questions. Capt. Jean A. Sauvageot, son of Dr. and Mrs. J. Paul Sauvageot of Akron, Ohio, was beginning another interview. (Ed. Note: Capt. Sauvageot is a 1956 graduate and Mrs.

J. Paul Sauvageot, the former Ludel Boden, was graduated in 1927.)

The information gathered in the hamlet was used in preparing military, aid and psychological warfare programs for that vicinity. The "Gallup Poll of the rice fields" is just another unusual aspect of the war in Vietnam.

"We have a series of questions that must be asked," Sauvageot said, "but we don't carry notebooks and we try to elicit the information through conversation.

"We ask if the people pay taxes to the Viet Cong. Has artillery wounded people in the village? If so, have they been compensated by the government? How much is the rent? Do you have an adequate water supply? Is there a radio in the hamlet?

"The answers to these and other questions are discussed and recorded by the interviewers as they ride to the next hamlet. The military escort is essential in areas where VC guerrillas are active.

"I always wear civilian clothes," the 32-year-old Ohio University graduate said, "because it would be hard to recognize me as an American from the distance you normally would expect sniper fire.

"The Viet Cong know what we are doing. But the fact that they know about us doesn't mean they can do something about it. No one knows where we're going next and the VC don't have time to react."

But Sauvageot, a short, wiry individual with deep blue eyes, carries a 45 caliber revolver under his pajama jacket.

His knowledge of Vietnamese is almost legendary in some parts of the delta. While most officers fumble with 20 or 30 key Vietnamese words, or work through an interpreter, Sauvageot speaks the tonal, complex language with ease.

"When I got here I decided I wanted to talk directly with the people. I don't like the presence of an interpreter." He hired an interpreter to serve as a teacher, and soon mastered Vietnamese.

"The Vietnamese smile when they see me in their type of clothing and talking their language," he continued. "It establishes a good rapport," said the Ohio University graduate who enlisted in the Army in 1956.

Sauvageot, who now is training new interview teams, spends most of his time in the field. He eats the local food—rice mixed with chicken, pork or fish—and on occasion has downed some local "cocktails." One Vietnamese drink is rice wine mixed with pig's blood.

The Captain, who won a purple heart when wounded by small arms while flying in an observation plane, has extended his normal 12-month tour for an additional six months. He has been in Vietnam since August, 1964.

"I like the Vietnamese people," he explained. "Their will to resist (the Communists) and their cheerfulness is amazing under the circumstances.

"I want to stay," he said, "because the last thing I would want to see is these gallant people swallowed up by Communism."

FROM THE COUNTRY TO THE BIG TOWN

Dave Hostetler, teacher, sculptor and gentleman farmer, has had a life-long ambition realized recently when he obtained a showing of his work in New York City, the only place where an artist can gain real recognition.

Time Magazine described his work this way:

"The sculptor's Amish folk, bathing beauties and long-gowned ladies all look as if they had come from the sticks for a day in the Big Town. . . . They'll never go back."

The New York Times also discovered Hostetler:

"These quaint, humorous figure carvings in colored wood combine the simplicity and directness of folk art with the sophistication of Nadelman."

Other publications, including Harper's Bazaar and several art magazines have carried pictures or stories concerning Hostetler's unique sculpture.

Hostetler, associate professor of sculpture, is not immune to such praise. He finds success gratifying aesthetically as well as financially. But recent successes in the form of sales at the going rate of $1,500 or more per sculpture have brought problems. He simply cannot produce art fast enough to satisfy the current demand. He has had to reject several shows in the past few months since his showing began in New York.

"One gallery man asked me for just a few crumbs," he said. "But I didn't even have any crumbs for him."

An hour after the exhibit opened at the Sculpture Center on East 69th Street in New York, a work titled "American Man" was snapped up and other pieces have since been sold. The money has helped him buy a new truck for his farm and a station wagon for his wife to replace a battered 1955 Nash.

New York art critics liked what they saw on display at the Sculpture Center on New York's East 69th Street.

Hostetler spends every spare moment in his workshop behind his farmhouse.

Hostetler's work combines simplicity and directness with a touch of sophistication.

"I remember someone saying that when you could convert art into cars, you really had something," he mused recently. "Apparently I have something going."

He recently returned to New York to add a few pieces to his showing. While his trips to the big city have proved fascinating he feels that New York City is only a place to visit, not to live. "Two weeks there is long enough for anyone," he said.

He has been teaching at Ohio University for the past 15 years where he has mixed teaching and his own creative ambitions well. Only during the summer months, when teaching hours have been shorter, has he been able to devote himself somewhat completely to his work. This past summer, for the first time, he had no teaching schedule and was busy at his sculpting table from early morning to late at night.

Hostetler, who has excellent self-discipline, still finds starting the hardest part of the effort. When he is not teaching, he begins the day with a walk around his farm where he raises cows.

Only rarely does he find time for social activities. Occasionally his young son may take him away from sculpting for a nature trip.

He finds satisfaction in teaching and refuses to leave it for full-time work as a sculptor, although his teaching schedule is demanding. He feels that university teaching is the only place for the artist, if the artist is willing to give everything to teaching as he would give everything to art.

Hostetler feels that the artist-teacher who half-heartedly teaches to save himself for his art is cheating himself and his students.

His first teaching job at Ohio University was as an instructor in pottery making when he operated his own pottery shop in Athens. The shop began as a one-man operation, but expanded to the point where six people worked for him while he attended to paperwork.

The artist in Hostetler rebelled when he no longer could be productive, but the final cleavage came when a salesman brought in an order for salt and pepper shakers shaped like backhouses. He said the shakers drove him to sell the business.

While working in pottery, Hostetler also was dabbling in sculpture. A friend admonished him for doing something so unprofitable and told him that sculpting was something he should do only after retirement. "I knew I couldn't wait until retirement to do what I really wanted to do," he said.

Hostetler's early work was definitely modern, but he became dissatisfied and gave up sculpting for a two-year period. While away from sculpting he began to study his Amish background and from this study evolved his approach to sculpting.

In the beginning he thought it was wrong to paint wood, but his study of the Amish pointed out the fact that they painted wood. He was also impressed with the directness in which the folk artist handled his subject.

The New York showing included 22 pieces of polychrome wood sculpture, which have been described as combining a feeling of sophisticated simplicity with the solid, almost primitive spirit found in the carved figure heads of sailing vessels.

All of the pieces are of figures, ranging from a Mennonite boy to a voluptuous bathing beauty. Although Hostetler deviates occasionally his primary subject is American woman. The pieces are carved from elm trees cut on Hostetler's farm and painted with a semi-transparent paint.

According to one critic, "Hostetler has been carving a new kind of home grown Americana of roughhewn figures that are witty, contemporary and fluent, simple and true to themselves."

Attitudes about Hostetler and his work have changed gradually. Nearby farmers show cautious tolerance toward him even now, but acquaintances, who formerly wondered why he spent so much time in his shed-like workhouse behind the farmhouse, have begun to examine his work with a more critical eye.

"Some people feel that anything that sells for $1,500 is worth looking at," he said.

Hostetler, associate professor of Sculpture, feels that university teaching is the only place for the artist.

Bromley Hall students relax in first floor lounge while others are busy studying in library on second floor.

A New Standard In Dormitory Living

Located in the heart of downtown Athens, Bromley Hall houses 580 students.

Bromley Hall, a new standard in dormitory living for several hundred Ohio University students, joins numerous other unique ventures in co-educational dormitories around the country.

Bromley, located at the intersection of West Union Street and North Congress Street across from the old United States Post Office building in downtown Athens, offers an ideal situation for students, according to Robert S. Brooks, director of Ohio University's first co-educational dormitory.

Privately-owned Bromley Hall includes many of the things students find necessary for successful college living. Each floor has a recreation area, a study area, a language lab, and a typing room, while the Hall has a library and a swimming pool.

"The theory behind Bromley is that the student shouldn't have to leave the building too often, which would result in the interruption of studies," said Brooks.

Bromley Hall, housing 463 students, which is slightly under capacity, underwent a few construction problems as late as a month after school began, while students were undergoing a few organization pains.

Problems such as organizing a student government were minor because the Bromley management had the foresight to set up a steering committee early last spring. By the time school opened, the hall was organized well enough to win five trophies in Siglympics and enter into the homecoming competition.

In the near future Bromley Hall will provide cultural activities with guest speakers and art exhibits as part of its program. Additionally, there is a stage in the cafeteria which allows the cafeteria to be utilized as an assembly hall.

Brooks and his wife Kathryn worked in dormitories, including a co-educational one, at the University of Colorado campus in Boulder, Colorado. A graduate of Colorado, Brooks majored in English while his wife majored in Latin American studies.

Tishman-Athens Corporation hired Brooks because of his work as a dormitory director in the 1,000 student co-educational dorm at Colorado which he helped open. But Brooks finds the job at Bromley vastly different from his work at the University of Colorado.

At Bromley he has had to deal with the business side of managing a dormitory which includes insurance, extermination, and even unemployment benefits for the large staff that it takes to operate the new hall. "I've gotten quite an education in operating a business," Brooks said.

The job of managing Bromley is a fulltime job in the strictest sense, at least during this first year of operation. Brooks and his wife live in an apartment on the first floor of Bromley, in the same manner as a resident manager in Ohio University dormitories.

Complaints are few in the new hall, except for the few gripes because the swimming pool was inoperative when the filter system wasn't completed last month, and the food serving line was slow during the period the food service was organizing.

The new hall is under the same rules as the University dormitories. The co-education feature of Bromley, under equally strict rules, has caused no problems for the manager and his wife since the female and male students have separate stairways and elevators. The stairway doors leading to the four men's residence floors are sealed off to the girls while the stairway leading to the girls' rooms is not accessible to the male students.

Each floor, patterned after the University's dorms, has two counselors who were chosen because of their leadership ability and were approved by the University. A counselor earns $1,000 of the $1,400 annual fee at Bromley.

The hall is an integral part of the housing program at the University and has the complete approval of the University. In order to keep informed of what is happening in the regular dormitories, Brooks and his wife attend dormitory resident manager's meetings with the University's dean of men and dean of women.

A few single rooms are available and Bromley has triple rooms, but a typical one is shared by two students who each have single beds, full-sized built-in desks, bookshelves, a large storage closet and dresser. A private bathroom connects each two rooms.

Bromley has 11 maids for the eight floors and several maintenance personnel to clean the swimming pool area and the various lounges. The bathrooms are cleaned daily and weekly the maids clean each room thoroughly. Students are responsible for the upkeep of rooms otherwise.

Bromley Hall is the first of a series of similar private halls that will be built across the country by the Tishman Realty and Construction Company. The company is planning only one per campus.

The new residence hall offers study rooms, language labs, typing rooms and recreation areas, in addition to a swimming pool.

Each floor has a study room where students are able to find a quiet place to prepare for their classes.

Class of '40 Celebrates Silver Anniversary

Nearly every reunion member was on his feet for impromptu remarks at the class dinner.

From the moment registration began at The Ohio Inn, enthusiasm was obvious.

"Has Sam Downer arrived yet?"

"Will Al Gubitz be here?"

"What about Professor Morton?"

"Someone call Loren Staats!"

Sixty-two members of the Class of 1940, with wives and husbands, were on campus in mid-September for their 25-year reunion, and the university's reunion programs will never be the same again.

For the first time in Ohio's history, the Alumni Association departed from the traditional June reunions, and the response by 1940 graduates assured success.

It was the largest reunion class on record, and plans are now being made to bring other classes to the campus during the academic year.

Highlights of the Class of 1940 weekend was an address by President Vernon R. Alden, a class reception at the home of President and Mrs. Alden, choice seats at Ohio's opening football game and a class party at which Sam Downer was master of ceremonies.

Professors Gubitz, Morton and Staats were guests of honor at the class dinner, and a unique program devised by Downer had nearly every reunion member on his feet for impromptu remarks.

Some returned with pre-college age youngsters to introduce them to Alma Mater. Among these were Milt Paushter of New York and Maynard Aldridge of Canton, Ohio.

Although Downer and J. Warren (Mac) McClure returned to Athens as members of the College of Business Administration's Visiting Committee, both were deeply immersed in the reunion weekend activities.

For most of the others, bus tours of the campus and the reports by President Alden and Vice President Martin L. Hecht were bridges from the pre-war period to the present change and growth of the Ohio campus.

If it was quite a weekend for the Class of 1940—and it was—it was also a revelation for Steve Vettters, president of the Class of 1966, who attended the 1940 class dinner.

"This was a tremendous experience for me," said Steve. "While I wasn't even born then, I feel I learned something about what the university was like twenty-five years ago. My class doesn't know it yet, but it has a real experience ahead of it when its 25-year reunion comes around."

The 62 members who returned witnessed the opening Ohio football game.

Appointed Vice President For Development

Martin L. Hecht, '46, has been named vice president for University development at Ohio University. The position was created recently by President Vernon R. Alden.

In his new position Hecht, who formerly was an assistant to President Alden, will administrate area development, private and public fund raising programs, special University occasions, University development and the private development of University-related facilities.

He will continue to administer the Institute for Regional Development, the Office of University Publications, the Office of Public Relations and the aviations division.

Hecht, a native of Cleveland, has served as director of alumni affairs, The Ohio University Fund, Inc., and area development. He has been active in planning and legislation for relocation of the Hocking River.

He shared in the formation of the Athens Business Association, and has worked closely with Hocking Valley leaders in the establishment of the Hocking Conservancy District. Along with area leaders he helped re-establish the Southeastern Ohio Regional Council on an active basis.

In addition to his University duties, Hecht is chairman of District IV of the Columbus Hospital Federation and a member of the Federation's Board of Trustees. He is also a member of the Rotary Club in Athens, a consultant to the Southeastern Ohio Regional Council, and a trustee of Sheltering Arms Hospital Foundation.

Following graduation from Ohio University, Hecht was assistant executive secretary of the Phi Delta Theta fraternity before returning to the University in 1948 as Non-Academic Personnel Director.

Hecht, married to the former Jean Righter, has two children, Holly and Ross.

HOMECOMING 1965

Alumni, students and townspeople lined the streets for the traditional Saturday morning parade.

The annual pre-game luncheon for returning alumni was held in Bird Arena near Peden Stadium.

"I left the house this morning at 4 a.m., drove through thick fog almost to Columbus, and then had rain most of the way into Athens, but it was worth it just to see a Homecoming parade again and all the new buildings on campus," said a returning Ohio alumnus. Light, intermittent showers continued throughout the early morning, but did little to dampen the spirit of the throngs that lined the parade route from Morris to Peden Stadium. Truly, it all added up to "A Novel Homecoming."

Friday evening a crowd estimated at 5000 saw Nancy Greer of Wilson Hall crowned 1965 Homecoming Queen, with Sue Fuller of Alpha Delta Pi and Joanne Booth of Pi Beta Phi named as her attendants. Elaine Barsky of Iota Social Club was named Miss Congeniality. Miss Greer, a resident of Dayton, O., is a cheerleader and social chairman of her dormitory. She garnered 590 of the record number 3724 votes cast.

Saturday morning dawned overcast and damp as weary, bleary-eyed float builders struggled to complete last-minute changes before lining up on Morris to make the trek up East State and around to Peden Stadium.

Alumni watched the one and one-half hour long parade and then hurried to Bird Arena for the annual pre-game luncheon and a chance to talk with old friends about old times. From Bird it was just a short walk to Peden Stadium, where Bill Hess' Bobcats battled like lions before losing to undefeated Xavier, 21-19. Ohio played an excellent game, and one alumnus was heard to say, "How can they be 0-5 with a ball club like that?" Football is a funny game.

Following the game, winners of the float and house decorations were announced. Winners in the women's float division were: first place, Howard Hall, "Time's Running Out For Xavier"; second place, Phi Mu; third place, Zeta Tau Alpha, and honorable mention, Alpha Xi Delta.

Winners in the men's float division were: first place, tie between Sigma Alpha Epsilon, "Ship of Fools," and Delta Upsilon, "Victory: Elementary My Dear Vernon"; second place, Phi Kappa Sigma; third place, Perkins Hall, and honorable mention, Phi Kappa Tau. The house decoration winners were: first place, Irvine Hall; second place, Bush Hall; third place, Gamertsfelder Hall, and honorable mention, Scott Quadrangle.

Addiss and Crofut, the folk singing duo who have toured Asia for the State Department, presented a concert prior to the Homecoming Dance Saturday evening. Music for the dance, "Lost Horizons," was by the Frank Bridges Band.

Branch Campus At Chillicothe Underway

State and University officials were on hand to watch Governor James A. Rhodes turn over the first shovelful of earth. Left to right, Chancellor of the Ohio Board of Regents John D. Millett, Governor Rhodes, President Vernon R. Alden and Dean of Off-Campus Academic Programs Edward M. Penson. Directly behind Dean Penson is Ohio Trustee Don M. Casto.

Interested residents braved the elements to witness the groundbreaking ceremonies. The Chillicothe Branch was the first established by Ohio University and the first to have a permanent campus.

Pouring rain didn't dampen the spirits of the citizens of Chillicothe on September 30 when Ohio Governor James A. Rhodes turned the first soggy spadeful of earth for Ohio University at Chillicothe. Hundreds were there to witness groundbreaking ceremonies for the first permanent branch campus building of Ohio University.

The two story Georgian building, designed by Sullivan, Isaacs and Sullivan Architects of Cincinnati, will house all Ohio University at Chillicothe branch functions. Two year curricula in the arts and sciences, business administration and education will be offered, as well as programs in fine arts and engineering. Opportunities for full and part-time study will be available and adult extension classes will also be held.

More than 89,000 square feet of classroom, library, laboratory and administrative facilities will be housed in the building. The Chillicothe campus has a planned enrollment of 5,000 students.

The Chillicothe branch was the first to be established by Ohio University. It is now in its 21st year.

Residents of Chillicothe conducted a six-year drive to obtain the permanent campus. They raised $500,000 necessary for the acquisition of campus land. The city of Chillicothe is spending $125,000 to widen and repave Keller Rd., leading to the campus.

Completion of the building is expected by October of next year. Knowlton Construction Co., Bellefontaine, is the general contractor.

On hand to wield the State of Ohio shaped shovel, the official shovel of the Ohio Department of Development, were Governor James A. Rhodes, Ohio University President Vernon R. Alden, Chancellor John D. Millett of the Board of Regents, George H. Pringle, president of the Mead Paper Corp., and vice president of the Ohio University-Chillicothe branch development board, and Edward M. Penson, Ohio Dean of Off-Campus Academic Programs.

Addressing the crowd Governor Rhodes said, "The most significant contribution that the people of southern Ohio can make toward development of the area is providing more employment. Facilities such as Ohio University at Chillicothe will help keep potential leaders in Chillicothe. It is insurance for area development."

Dr. Alden termed the groundbreaking a "great day for Chillicothe and Ohio University." He described Alvin Jones, a vice president on the Ohio University at Chillicothe development board, as possibly the founder of all college branches in the state.

The Ohio President said it was Mr. Jones who first approached Ohio University officials about the establishment of a branch college in Chillicothe.

Currently enrolled in the Chillicothe branch are 814 students who now attend classes in Chillicothe High School and a local Presbyterian Church.

Edward Penson, Ohio University Dean of Off-Campus Programs, said, "Expanding branches such as Chillicothe are the answer to providing quality education for the increasingly large numbers of students who are seeking it."

The building will cost $1.9 million. Both day and night classes will be held in the building, which will accommodate 1,000 students at any one class period.

The Chillicothe groundbreaking is the first of four planned by Ohio University this fall. Other initial buildings will be constructed on new campuses in Belmont County, Portsmouth and Zanesville.

Ohio University established the first branch college in the state of Ohio at Chillicothe in 1946. The continually expanding program at Ohio University now numbers seven university branches.

For both Ohio University and the people of Chillicothe the groundbreaking ceremonies marked the successful culmination of a long standing dream.

Eight Inducted Into Athletic Hall Of Fame

Eight former Ohio University athletic greats, names in the past that will live on forever, were formally inducted as charter members of Ohio's newly-created Athletic Hall of Fame in ceremonies preceding the Homecoming football game October 16.

Honored were Frank Baumholtz, '41, Claude C. Chrisman, '32, Brandon T. Grover, '19, Dr. Stanley Dougan, '14, Clyde Gibson,

'13, Don C. Peden, William J. Trautwein, and the late Russ Finsterwald, '19. Mr. Finsterwald's award was accepted by his widow, Mrs. Russ Finsterwald.

The Ohio University Athletic Hall of Fame was the brainchild of Ohio Athletic Director William D. Rohr. Rohr, an Ohio Wesleyan graduate, is one of the youngest members of his alma mater's Hall of Fame. Serving on the selection committee are B. T. Grover, Darrell T. Sams, James E. Snyder, National Alumni President Milton J. Taylor, Alumni Executive Secretary Jack D. Gilbert, Frank D. Morgan and Rohr.

At a post-game banquet at the Ohio University Inn, Rohr announced that photographs of the eight charter members would be placed in the new Fred Beasley Center, the convocation and athletic center to be built on Richland Avenue starting in the spring.

The large Homecoming day crowd was still filing into Peden Stadium when the eight honorees took their place on the 50-yard line to receive commemorative plaques. At the banquet each was presented a wrist watch with his name and the year 1965 inscribed. "Ohio University Hall of Fame" appears on the face of the watch.

Baumholtz, the only All-American basketball player in Ohio's history and later a major league star, led the 1941 Bobcats to the NIT finals and was named the most valuable player of the tournament. He is a district sales manager in the Red-Heart Division of John Morrell Meat Packing Company in northeast Ohio.

Chrisman, All-Buckeye Conference and All-Ohio guard on the great teams of 1929-30-31 which won the league title three straight years, capped off a successful career as player and official when he officiated in the 1964 Rose Bowl game. Now retired from officiating, he is general manager for the Ferd Hack Auto Supply Co. in Logan, Ohio.

Grover served Ohio for 43 years as graduate manager of athletics, director of public relations, assistant to the president, director of athletics, assistant football coach and head basketball coach. Now retired from the university, he is affiliated with the Athens Television Cable Company.

Dougan was a star baseball pitcher and his 19 strikeouts in one game still stands as a record. He played professionally before pursuing a medical career. He practiced obstetrics and gynecology in San Jose, California, for 27 years. Now retired, he resides in Palo Alto, Calif., and Honolulu, Hawaii.

Gibson is one of Ohio's few 12 letter award winners, winning four letters each in football and baseball and a pair apiece in basketball and track. A teller at the Athens National Bank for the past 40 years, he resides in Amesville.

Peden was one of the great all-time football and baseball coaches in Ohio's history. Also Ohio's athletic director, his football coaching mark from 1926-46 was 123 wins, 44 losses and 11 ties. A member of the Helms Athletic Foundation Hall of Fame, he is retired and lives in Bloomington, Ill.

Trautwein served Ohio for 35 years, 11 of those as head basketball coach when his teams won 135 and lost 91. He coached the 1941 team of which Baumholtz was the leader. He also served as assistant football coach, assistant athletic director and ticket manager. Retired, he lives in Athens.

Finsterwald quarterbacked the teams of 1914 and 1915, and later returned in 1919 as assistant football coach. He was head coach from 1920-22 and also served as head basketball coach. A Big Ten football official from 1923 to 1951, he also served as Athens County prosecuting attorney for two terms. He was a practicing attorney in Athens for 39 years prior to his death in June, 1962.

Don Peden, former Ohio University football coach and athletic director, receives his Hall of Fame commemorative plaque from President Vernon R. Alden.

Bobcats Ready To Defend MAC Cage Title

A relaxed Jim Snyder sat in an office he shares with his two assistants in Grover Center and casually thumbed through an early edition of a college basketball magazine. "I know they've picked us to win it again," he said, "but if you read a little down the page you find they give everyone a shot at it this year." Ohio shared the top spot last year with Miami and represented the Mid-American Conference in the NCAA tourney by virtue of a 76-71 playoff victory over the Redskins at Dayton.

Snyder, about to embark on his 17th season as head coach, lost three starters from last year's squad that posted an impressive 19-7 ledger against some rugged opposition. "We only have two starters back," stated Snyder. "People get confused because they think Dave Brown was a starter, but in reality, he was never a starter although he played quite a bit."

Gone from the squad are forwards Don Hilt and Mike Haley, and guard Tom Davis. Together, Hilt and Haley accounted for 2136 points and 1316 rebounds in three varsity years. "When you take 45 points a game from your starting lineup it's a little hard to replace," said Snyder. Hilt is currently the school's all-time scoring leader and Haley ranks in the top ten.

"We're going to have to pick up the slack," said Snyder. "Fortunately, enough of our sophomores saw enough action last season to be of help," he added. It's obvious that the Bobcats will be hurt in the rebounding department, too, but there is hope this can be remedied.

The dean of MAC coaches welcomed back only one senior, guard Tom Weirich, when practice opened October 15. Weirich, a 5-10 Cincinnati Mt. Healthy product, saw very little action last year, and is slated for reserve duty this season. Some pessimists might say there is little hope for the Bobcats to bring home their fifth title in seven years. But Snyder has been down this path before, each time managing to get the limit from untried sophomores and juniors.

Seven sophomores, up from last year's mediocre freshman squad, are being given the opportunity. Right now, the best of the lot seems to be Fred Cluff, a 6-7 forward from Hillsboro, O. Cluff's 17.5 average paced the Bobkitten scorers and he also led the team in rebounding with 14.5 per game. Also in contention is 6-2 Wayne Young, a straight-A student from Hamden, O., at an outside forward or guard post. Other sophomores include Fred Gibson of Athens, Art Davis of Fairborn, Marshall Hatcher of Durham, Ky., Jack Lewis of Marion, O., and Jack Hempstead of Springfield, O.

The two returning starters are 6-9 junior center John Schroeder and 5-9 junior guard Mike Hammond. Schroeder led the conference in rebounding last season and gained valuable experience against the likes of Davidson's Fred Hetzel, Indiana's VanArsdale twins and Dayton's Henry Finkel.

"Schroeder has a much better outlook this season," said Snyder. "He is more relaxed and reported in about 15 pounds heavier, which puts him around 220." The Norwalk, O., native started slowly last season, but midway through the season gained some confidence and rarely did he score under double figures.

Hammond won the guard position before the opening game last year and seems a fixture there until graduation. The Columbus, O., product leads the Bobcat fast break, is a demon on defense and is a consistent scorer. His running mate outside will be Brown, a 6-0 sharpshooter from Steubenville, O. It was Brown's great second half performance at Dayton that gave the Bobcats victory over Miami and another trip to the NCAA. He is also a junior.

Snyder's problem, and he's the first to admit it, will be at the forward positions held down by the now departed Hilt and Haley. "We're looking at everyone," he said, and by that he meant any two of seven could get the starting nod. Right now the inside track for one spot is held by Ken Fowlkes, a high school teammate of Hammond at Columbus East. He saw limited duty last season as a replacement for Hilt and showed good rebounding ability and a fair shot. The 6-4 junior is erratic at times and will have to cut down on his fouling to be of help.

Running a close race for the other position are junior Russ Hamilton, a 6-3 Marion Harding graduate, and sophomore Cluff. Hamilton also saw limited action last season as a late-in-the-game replacement and is described by his coach as "a good defensive man with a cool head." Also in contention are junior Phil Williams of Columbus, Don Spires of Irondale, Berke Reichenbach of Euclid and sophomore Young. Reichenbach and Young can also play guard, and both Cluff and Spires can move into the pivot without difficulty.

A rugged 23-game schedule awaits Snyder's Bobcats, with away games outside the conference against Northwestern, Purdue, Loyola of Chicago, Davidson and Miami of Florida highlighting the action. "It's a tough schedule," admits Snyder, "but one comparable with other years." At home, Ohio will host San Francisco State, Brown and Seattle.

"The Mid-American Conference will be better balanced and will hardly be a two-team race like last year," Snyder said. "Miami, Bowling Green and Marshall are always tough at home, and Western Michigan and Kent State have all their starters back. It should be an interesting season."

Snyder's record for 16 years is 226 victories and 151 defeats, an outstanding mark considering he was an assistant football coach the first ten years. The 1965-66 Bobcats will be out to continue their 25-game unbeaten skien chalked up on the Grover Center hardwood. Their last loss was a 66-62 defeat at the hands of Bowling Green, February 9, 1963.

OHIO 0 WEST TEXAS 7

Defense was the bright spot in the Bobcats' opener, played in 100-degree weather at Peden Stadium, as Ohio limited West Texas to 35 total yards rushing. West Texas quarterback Hank Washington threw a nine-yard pass for the Texans' only score. The 27 passes attempted by Bobcat passers was one less than the all-time single game passing mark.

OHIO 7 MARYLAND 24

"They didn't beat us as much as we beat ourselves," said Coach Bill Hess after the Bobcats' loss to Maryland, nationally ranked in a pre-season poll. Maryland's defense proved too strong for Ohio, which failed to move offensively except for a 74-yard drive early in the second half.

OHIO 10 KENT STATE 27

The Bobcat defense, strong in the previous two non-conference games, failed to stop a powerful Kent State offense in Ohio's first Mid-American Conference contest. Although Kent managed to complete only three passes, all three were important. The Ohio offense showed improvement, totaling 162 yards on the ground and 118 yards in the air.

OHIO 7 TOLEDO 21

A hustling Toledo team managed to turn a cold, wet night at Toledo's Glass Bowl into a pleasant night's work, capitalizing on several Bobcat mistakes. With Ohio leading 7-0 in the first period, a bad snap to the Ohio punter resulted in safety for Toledo. Another score by Toledo made the score 8-7 at halftime. In the third period, with Ohio in possession on its own five, the Ohio quarterback had the ball stolen from him and Toledo scored again.

OHIO 19 XAVIER 21

Many persons were willing to concede that Ohio University had the best 0-5 football team in the country (Xavier coach Ed Bilies was the first to say so) after a last minute victory by undefeated Xavier in the Bobcats' homecoming game. Ohio was leading 17-15 with 1:31 remaining when outstanding Muskie quarterback Carroll Williams tossed a touchdown pass to pull out the victory. Ohio did outgain Xavier 204-28 on the ground, but Williams' air game was the difference as he completed 20 of 36 passes for 311 yards.

OHIO 0 MIAMI 34

Miami's title-hungry Redskins, smarting after five straight losses to Ohio, tallied three touchdowns in the second quarter and went on to hand the Bobcats their worst defeat of the season. The hosts sent fullback Joe Kozar over the goal three times and tallied two others on long passes. Ohio netted only 98 total yards, with 89 of these coming through the airways. The closest the 'Cats came to scoring was a third quarter drive that stalled on the 'Skin 15.

OHIO 7 DAYTON 13

Two first quarter touchdowns were enough to give the host Flyers their first win of the season over the luckless Bobcats. Ohio tallied in the third quarter on a pass from quarterback John Edwards to end Bob Beach, but several other scoring chances went by the boards in the final stanza.

OHIO 6 WESTERN MICHIGAN 17

A few costly mistakes hurt the Bobcats as Western won before 16,300 at Peden Stadium. Ohio's tally was gamered by fullback Wash Lyons, but just when the Bobcats seemed to be picking up speed the Broncos ran back an intercepted pass for six points to put the game on ice.

OHIO 7 BOWLING GREEN 17

Ohio defensive halfback Glenn Hill raced a punt back 78 yards for a touchdown in the early moments of the first quarter, but a charged up Falcon squad came roaring back in the second half to win and clinch a share of the MAC title with Miami. Ohio held a 7-0 halftime lead, but the burly Falcons put together two long drives for touchdowns and added a field goal for the margin of victory.

OHIO 14 MARSHALL 29

Two quick first quarter touchdowns and a second quarter field goal gave Marshall a 16-0 halftime bulge, but the Bobcats battled back with two markers in the third period to narrow the margin to only two points. The Thundering Herd added 13 more points in the final stanza to put the game out of reach. Ohio's points came on a one yard run by senior quarterback Wes Danyo and a 19-yard pass from Danyo to halfback Sam Bogan.

BANTON LEADS HARRIERS

All-American Elmore Banton won both the All-Ohio and Mid-American cross country medalist honors but the Bobcats could manage only second and third places respectively. Miami captured first place in both races, and Western Michigan copped second place in the MAC.

KEMPTON NAMED ASSISTANT

Dave Kempton, former sports editor of the Chillicothe, O., Gazette and the Portsmouth, O., Times, was named assistant sports information director at Ohio in July. The 23-year-old Athens native attended Ohio for two years before accepting the sports editorship at Chillicothe. He is assistant to Frank Morgan, sports information director.

Ohio University in the News

A capsuled account of University activity as reported by the American Press

OHIO UNIVERSITY is among twelve midwestern universities that have formed an organization to promote graduate studies in science. Under a cooperative arrangement with Argonne National Laboratory near Chicago, faculty members and top senior students from the 12 universities will use the Argonne facilities for research and resident training.

Announcement of the organization, called the Central States Universities, Inc., was made August 6 by Dr. Charles A. Randall, Jr., chairman of the Ohio physics department and president of the board of CSU.

The proposed project calls for selected seniors preparing for graduate school to spend a semester or more in residence at Argonne. Part of the student's time would be spent in research associations with Argonne scientists and part in directed course work.

A CALL to the nation's businessmen to offer their time and talents to government was made by Ohio President Vernon R. Alden in an article appearing in the August issue of DUN'S REVIEW.

Charging that not enough businessmen are involving themselves in the formation of public policy, President Alden stated that "business may be losing its voice in national affairs . . . The businessman is spending so much time at home minding the store that he is missing the boat. If we are not willing to spend time in the formulation of national policy, then we have no right to complain about the policies and programs that are developed.

"Businessmen—practical, hard-working, concerned businessmen—must involve themselves in government—I believe so strongly in individual initiative and in our free-enterprise system that I am convinced America's problems will not be solved without the active participation of businessmen."

AN APPROPRIATION of $107,517 under the Area Redevelopment Act to help finance the second year's operation of the Institute for Regional Development at Ohio University was announced September 2 in Washington, D. C. The first year's operation was financed by a $118,000 ARA grant.

The institute has attracted attention in Ohio beyond the boundaries of the 21 counties it serves. According to Allen D. Ashbolt, staff writer for the Cleveland Plain Dealer, "those interested in the growth and development of southeastern Ohio have come to depend on the year-old institute.

"The institute provides the 300 communities and political subdivisions of the region with technical assistance that lasts. It is keyed to finding practical solutions and seeing them through, not just in detailing problems. Progress and renewed vigor are the result of the institute's efforts," he concluded.

FORTY-ONE women from 12 African countries who took part in a workshop in home improvement at Ohio University assessed it as a combination of instruction in practical methods and American emphasis on individual ingenuity.

The six-week workshop offered the women instruction in wood-working skills, webbing beds and simple masonry techniques. Lectures covered methods of promoting sanitation in village homes, knowledge of bacteriology and of how diseases spread, and requirements for safe water supplies and food storage.

Most of the women enrolled in the workshop were brought to the United States by the Agency for International Development for a series of workshops and went on from Ohio to other campuses and cities. Director of the Ohio workshop was Dr. Vivian Roberts, chairman of the department of home economics.

INVESTING IN THE FUTURE OF OHIO UNIVERSITY

Alumni, parents and friends interested in joining Ohio University in its exciting, yet demanding task of serving the needs of higher education can do so in a variety of ways. For instance:

- The undesignated or unrestricted gift is of special value for it can be applied directly to the University's most pressing current need.

- In keeping with the special interests of contributors, gifts may be designated for scholarship aid, for specific building projects or for retaining and attracting additional qualified faculty members.

- For those persons who might be interested in perpetuating a name in an appropriate memorial, there are opportunities to underwrite a building, part of a building, a special facility, or to endow a scholarship or a professorship.

FROM INCOME — Annual gifts out of income from an increasing number of people and companies comprise the backbone of gift support for higher education. To conduct an adequate annual giving program, Ohio University requires a steady hike in the number of givers, increased regularity in giving, contributions in more direct proportion to the donors' means. Such gifts are tax deductible.

FROM ACCUMULATED RESOURCES — Rather than give from income, donors may prefer to draw on accumulated resources in the form of securities or properties. This method saves on capital gains taxes as well as income and estate taxes; and, for maximum savings, can be spread over several years.

LIFE INCOME PLANS — Many people are so situated that they cannot afford to part with a sizeable share of their accumulated resources unless they can retain income from the gift. To meet that need, the University can pay, to the donor, the income his gift earns as part of the University's investment pool. This plan provides income and real estate savings and may improve the donor's income while relieving him of the details of managing his investments.

GIFT ANNUITIES — Contributions can be used to establish a gift annuity which differs from the Life Income Plan by providing a fixed annual income instead of payments that vary with the earnings of the investment pool.

LIFE INSURANCE GIFTS — A donor of modest means who wishes to make a substantial gift may accomplish this by assigning insurance policies, either old or new, to the University. Subsequent premiums paid by the donor are tax deductible.

BEQUESTS BY WILL — A growing number of University friends are remembering the University in their wills with both large and small gifts. Such bequests may be made in such a way that income from the gift will continue to be paid to the donor's survivor or, if all the estate is needed to provide for the survivors, the University can still be named as a contingent beneficiary.

To determine which plan is most suitable for any specific situation, complete the box below and send to the Director, The Ohio University Fund, Inc., Baker Center, Athens, Ohio 45701.
